A REMARKABLE CASE OF CRIME.—A trial which developed some singular incidents, has lately closed in the United States Circuit Court at Cleveland, Ohio. The circumstances are substantially these: In December, 1863, a young hanker at Hudson, Michigan, named Wm. W. Treadwell, possessing large capital and a high reputation for integrity and business capacity, borrowed upward of $60,000 from banks in Cleveland, Chicago, Detroit, Adrian and Hillsdale, and then absconded, taking his booty in a black satchel. Nothing was heard of him until February 8, 1864, when he arrived at Mansfield, Ohio, under the assumed name of C. Clemmer. While there, Treadwell met an old friend to whom he showed a large amount of money, some $60,000, and said he intended to return to Hudson and pay his debts. On the evening of the 10th instant, Treadwell's wife and her father, named Samuel Hester, of Centerville, Ohio, visited him at Mansfield with a small trunk. As the party were on the way to the depot the next day, Treadwell and his wife were arrested and the trunk seized, but Hester made off with the black satchel. Treadwell was taken to Michigan, tried, convicted and sentenced to jail. On the last day of the trial his wife secretly gave him $2,600, and that same evening he broke jail, in company with a horse thief named Cowell, to whom he disclosed the fact of having a large sum of money. After escaping from jail Cowell murdered his companion in a piece of woods and stole his watch and money. Long afterward a wood chopper discovered Treadwell's body, which, by a series of providential circumstances, was identified and the murder traced to Cowell, who was committed in May, 1865, and executed in September following, after confessing his guilt. Samuel Hester, Treadwell's father-in-law, who ran away with the satchel at Mansfield, returned to his home at Centerville, after various adventures, one of which led to an attempt to arrest him as a thief, but which he resisted with firearms, and finally escaped because the sheriff, when he saw him, decided that he was not the right man. Soon after a woman employed by Mrs. Hester discovered Samuel Hester, Mrs. Treadwell and his Hester counting a large amount of money—"a peck measure full," as she testified on the trial. This led to the arrest of Samuel Hester, and the trial which has just closed shows that it was the money fraudulently obtained by Treadwell, and the plaintiff in the case obtained a verdict for $35,500. The case affords another illustration of the saying "the way of the transgressor is hard." Treadwell was murdered, his murderer executed, and the father in law, who is supposed to have prompted Treadwell to commit the crime in the hands of justice, and compelled to relinquish his ill-gotten wealth.

KING OF DENMARK.—The King of Denmark has lately been to St. Petersburg on a visit to his daughter the Czarewna, and was much pleased with his trip. The career of this King of the North is curious. He was not called by birth to the throne; he was indebted for his elevation to a diplomatic combination—the famous treaty of 1852, which also guaranteed to him the Duchies since seized by Prussia. The king will not, probably, transmit to his son, in its integrity, the heritage which fortune bestowed on him; but, by way of compensation, what establishments has he not bestowed upon his children? Of two daughters, one has married the Prince of Wales, heir to the crown of Great Britain; the other, the future autocrat of all the Russias. One of his sons is the husband of a Grand Duchess niece of the Czar, daughter of Constantine, and reigns over the Greeks, far from the natal soil. The heir of the throne is about to marry the only daughter of the King of Sweden, and thereby concentrate on his head the three Scandinavian crowns of Denmark, Sweden and Norway. The two other infants of Denmark—the Princess Waldemar and Princess Thira—are very young, if they should have the luck to make French or Spanish matches, the kingship of the Bourbons would pale before that of the House of Holstein.—Wing.

DUMAS.—A correspondent of the Boston Commercial Bulletin says, "Dumas is extremely obese, and moves about with great difficulty. He is a man of powerful frame as well as mind, and labors almost incessantly with his pen. His features are decidedly African, and his woolly hair reminds us in its grayness of the old Uncle Tom. As he grows upon him he becomes the victim of peculiar whims and fancies; he cooks his own food, conducting the culinary ceremony with a religious exactitude, and is always satisfied with his cuisine productions. When he eats, and that is very irregularly and seldom, he apparently enjoys his food. After his meals he returns to his chair and dictates to the young lady into a dictation, and he drops off to a calm slumber. He scarcely ever retires to a bed, but sits and sleeps an hour or two, and instantly upon awakening calls for his amanuensis and proceeds with his work. "At present he is engaged in writing a review of the Harve Marine Exposition, which is published in weekly numbers, a new novel of a few hundred pages, and two plays for theatres in Paris. With this work before him, and being noticed in his reviews, his time is fully occupied, and it seems wonderful that he bears up so well. Since Menken died it is said that he has grieved deeply, as he was very much attached to her. Dumas, Jr., is here often, but we see very little of him."

WEST VIRGINIA COAL AND OIL LANDS.—Messrs. Gilson & Co. sold in Baltimore, on Wednesday, several tracts of land in Ritchie county, West Virginia, on the south fork of Hughes river, supposed to be in the heart of the coal oil region, containing 7,400 acres, embraced in fourteen several patents; purchased by the Rev. George D. Purviance, for $50 per acre. Also, all the right, title and interest of Samuel and Robert Purviance in and to 26,000 acres of land in Clay county, formerly part of Braxton county, West Virginia, sold for $5 per acre to Rev. George D. Purviance.
